Overview

The natal chart, or birth chart, is essentially a “map” of the position of celestial bodies and mathematically-derived points in the sky at the very time a person is born. If Emma could have looked 360 degrees around the sky at the moment she took her first breath, she would have seen the placement of the cosmos—in perfect position for her and who she is, providing her with the lifelong tools to allow her to become her truest, most authentic self and be outfitted in such a way that she has the potential to fulfill her deepest life purpose.

When Emma was born, the Sun was in the sign of Gemini, and the Moon was in the sign of Libra. The Sun’s astrological placement describes a person’s will and purpose, their day-to-day personality—the core Self. A Gemini Sun gives Emma a strong mind and a strong sense of curiosity about life and other people, and it generally makes her an able communicator. The Moon rules our emotions and describes how we respond to change. Emma’s Libra Moon indicates that she has a special sensibility for seeing the beauty in the world. Her Ascendant, or Rising Sign, is in the sign of Scorpio. The Ascendant describes the way we experience the world and the way the world experiences us. With a Scorpio Ascendant, intensity and passion play a key role in the way in which Emma approaches life.

Emma is likely to have a busy and achievement-oriented personality, to be talkative yet careful with her words, and to care a great deal about relationships. She can be extremely nurturing in the way she relates to others. Fairness is very important to her. Her chart reflects a strong feminine character, as seven of the ten planets are in feminine, or yin, signs. Emma’s chart has one grand trine, which describes energy, or flow, that comes quite naturally to her. Her particular grand trine indicates once again that she has a strong mind. She responds to change and processes emotion by thinking and talking things through with others, and by relating one thing to another. Being with and connecting with others is very important to her, both on a one-to-one basis and in a group setting. When she is frustrated or angry, however, detachment may be her modus operandi. Home will always be a sacred space for Emma, and home/family will provide her greatest sense of joy and fulfillment. A conservative approach to money and possessions will be a factor. Looking inward and focusing on her soul evolution will be an essential theme in her life. In her work, she will be one to take initiative and she will experience empowering change.

In all that she does, Emma’s life will be a journey toward developing her higher mind, and at the same time her quest will be to allow herself to be seen as an unconventional individual in service to humanity’s highest and collective good. She may find that she experiences times of significant loneliness and separation; these phases are to be allowed and embraced, as they will always be productive. These times are part of Emma’s life challenge to forge a creative life such that she may give generously to the world—in her own unique and special way.

Ascendant (Rising Sign) in the Sign of Scorpio

The Rising Sign, or Ascendant, describes a person's outermost energy or persona that others first see. It represents the way a person actively merges with life in the outer world when their energy is flowing spontaneously. When Emma was born at 6:27 p.m. in Bristol, New Hampshire, the Sun was coming up over the horizon on the other side of Earth, in the Sign of Scorpio. With this Rising Sign placement, Emma is initially experienced by others as intense, passionate and deep, and she can seem mysterious or even secretive to other people. Privacy and secrecy are likely to always remain important to her, especially when she first encounters new people. She may have an intense look to her appearance, especially in the eyes, but she will also appear sweet and refreshingly innocent. She will carry with her a strong personal magnetism, and a very strong will. Generally, as an adult Emma is likely to be very good at working within a group dynamic. She will be quite savvy with understanding other people's motives and will be able use this to her own advantage when needed (and usually for the highest good!).

With Jupiter conjunct (aligned) just two degrees to Emma's Ascendant, this brings an even more expanded Scorpionic energy about her. Emma will present herself and be seen by others as having what could be described as a shamanic mystic.

Sun in Gemini in the 7th House

The Sun Sign is usually dominant in considering a person's overall psychology. The Sun Sign describes a person's will and purpose, their day-to-day personality—the core Self. Gemini is an air sign, which makes Emma's day-to-day personality one that centers around her mind. People with the Sun in an air sign live in the abstract realm where a thought is as real as any material object. People with Gemini Sun can experience and hold two or more sides of things at the same time. Emma will engage in many varied experiences to gain knowledge. She is probably a witty person as well. All of her curiosity and quick-mindedness may make her seem nervous at times, or high-strung. She may be easily bored if things are too predictable and unchanging. When she learns self-discipline, she may well have tremendous intellectual capability. She is likely to greatly enjoy being with others and experiencing and learning about herself through her relationship with others. Throughout life there may be a sort of push-pull in her need to be with others and then to pull back to regain her sense of her own identity. The way Emma observes her father to behave and conduct himself on the average day, and particularly in relationship, will have a significant impact on how Emma chooses to conduct herself.

Moon in Libra in the 11th House

The Moon describes how we process emotion and find a sense of security. As children, we are naturally attuned to our Moon needs, and as we grow into adulthood, we become more and more like our Sun nature. But the Moon remains our emotional core. Regardless of what happens in life to Emma, good or bad, her Moon describes how she needs continually to be nurtured.

As a Libra Moon, peaceful and harmonious surroundings will bring Emma a sense of security, and color will have a special impact on her. As a baby she may have been particularly irritated by harsh surroundings or rough surfaces. Aesthetics are important to this child, even in her earliest years. As a child she is likely to have a gentle nature, despite the intensity and busy-ness of her Ascendant and Sun. Even from her youngest years, it will be very important to her to relate to others. Reaching out to others and feeling connected is one of her most powerful motivators. Play and toys that allow her to express and experience her own artistic nature will be the most enjoyable for her. Art supplies, perhaps also music, dressing up in costume, and decorating and redecorating her space will be important ways for her to create safety and comfort for herself. Immersing herself in things she finds beautiful and feeling connected to others brings her a sense of security.

One of the greatest challenges Emma may face is developing self-confidence. Parents should encourage her to be present in this struggle, as an emerging butterfly necessarily struggles in its cocoon. She will look to her relationships for strength, and it will sometimes be hard for her to recognize her own strengths. She may feel more confident in the company of family and friends. Knowing her people are nearby will be a help in her younger years. Be with her to practice things before she goes off on her own to perform or be tested. She is likely to be very sensitive to peer pressure, so being able to talk openly (to relate with you) about these issues as she grows into her teen and adult years will be an enormous gift to her and a boon to her self-confidence. Her mother will be a particularly important 'partner' in helping Emma to build her self-assertiveness. The way her mother models peace-making and relationship-building will be very influential on her.

As she grows up, and throughout her adult life, Emma is likely to seek security in the company of friends and group associations, although she may be hesitant to commit allegiance to one group or another in order to avoid being labeled in any particular way. She may prefer to have different types of acquaintances in varied group settings. She may have a tendency to overextend herself, and she may need to learn to avoid taking on too much responsibility within the groups she aligns herself with, but she'll continue to associate with like-minded people nonetheless, since she creates a sense of comfort for herself in this way.

Mercury in Taurus in the 7th House

The planet Mercury describes the mind: how we learn, what we choose to learn about, and how we communicate to others. With Mercury in the sign of Taurus, people tend to communicate carefully, choosing each word deliberately. Emma may tend to savor her words at times. This measured way of communicating will have a certain grounding effect on what is otherwise an especially chatty tendency for her as a Gemini Sun. Taurus is an earth sign; therefore, Emma may learn better through practical application than through verbal or written instruction.

Taurus is also known for its stubborn nature, and so Emma may have a strong tendency to want to understand things in her own way, and to believe what she wants to believe. She will need to take her time when making decisions, but once she does, she will be steadfast in her decision.

With her Taurus Mercury in the 7th House of relationship, combined with the influences of her Libra Moon and her Gemini Sun, Emma will connect with other people through the mind and body. Intellectual expression for her is likely to always be a very natural form of relating, and she may also introduce a very earthy or sensual way of connecting with others as well. In her work, for example, she may choose to serve in a healing or mind-body capacity through Reiki, yoga, meditation, or herbal medicine.

Mars in Aquarius in the 3rd House

Mars describes how we assert ourselves, what motivates us, and how we express anger. Aquarius is an air sign, just as Emma's Sun in Gemini and Moon in Libra are in the element of air. These three planets—Sun, Moon, and Mars—in the three air signs form Emma's grand trine. In each person's chart there exist recurring themes; being of an intellectual nature is certainly one of Emma's recurring life themes. This natural flow of intellectual energy may be so strong that at times she seems to be stuck in her own head. Mars in Aquarius lends an additional non-conformist mentality to Emma's already stubborn Taurus Mercury. However, while it may sometimes be difficult to convince Emma to see things differently, she will possess a very enterprising, ambitious, future-oriented, and possibly scientific orientation. She will be motivated by working toward progressive change. The unknown will motivate her much more than conventional activity.

When Emma is angry, she may tend to detach and come across as impersonal. Or she may suddenly strike, behaving through her external Ascendant persona and "sting" with a Scorpionic intensity. But because she has such a strong need for connection with others, her detachment or sting will be met before too long with calm and a return to a focus on relatedness.

Venus in Cancer in the 8th House

Here we see another recurring theme emerge: Emma has a tender, caring way in intimate relationship, although she may be reluctant at first to enter into relationship. Others may at first experience her as having such a strong achievement-orientation and intensity that she is perceived as unapproachable. She may also be experienced as moody in relationship. Once in a close relationship, however, she will be especially attentive to the other and will enjoy being loved and appreciated in return for her nurturing, sensitive nature. The seriousness once seen as a deterrent will be experienced as fierce loyalty to the relationship. Family will always be powerfully important to Emma. At one or more times in her life, intimate relationship will bring profound personal transformation for her, with a death-and-rebirth type of experience.

Chiron in Aries in the 5th House, Square Venus

Chiron is an asteroid body that orbits the Sun between Saturn and Uranus. Where it is placed in the natal chart represents the area in life where the most healing needs to occur. It represents a culmination of wounds from past lives that we choose to heal when coming into this life. Chiron is known as The Wounded Healer; that is, it is only after we face, understand, and heal our wounds that we can become our fullest, most authentic selves. Emma's Chiron placement suggests that there may be significant challenges in her younger years (and possibly into her 30s and 40s if the wounds are not properly attended to) in regard to asserting herself and differentiating herself among her peers. And/or, it may be that she is so strongly assertive and different as a young person that she alienates herself from peers and romantic interests to a painful degree.

It can be scary to go against the crowd and stand up for what you believe in, especially when it's unpopular or possibly ahead of its time. Emma is a bit of a warrior in this regard. This is part of her becoming a spiritually mature soul. It will be important for her to ignore popular opinion and stay true to her heart. Ultimately, as she acknowledges and heals her wounds, Emma becomes an even stronger, independent and unique person who does not hesitate to claim the limelight and does so in a way that promotes forward momentum for all.

Part of Fortune Conjunct Neptune in Pisces in the 4th House

This reads like quite an astrological mouthful, but what it comes down to is that Emma will create a home space for herself that brings a deep sense of inner tranquility and unity with all that is. We see this with her Libra Moon as well. Her home will be a sacred place for creativity and spiritual transcendence. It is likely to be an unconventional setting. Being present in this peaceful space and allowing herself the luxury of retreating into her soul will bring Emma her greatest sense of fulfillment in life. This is where she will feel she is in her greatest and most natural flow. Her connection to her highest source, to her unconscious depths, and to her most inspired conscious awareness becomes available through the sacred space she creates in the home and within her own soul. It is likely she has inherited this sense of deep spirituality through her ancestors.

North Node in Leo in the 9th House

If the natal chart is a map of a person's psyche, the North Node is the needle of their compass. All the planets in a person's astrological toolbox are positioned such that the person is given opportunities and challenges throughout life that guide them in the direction of the North Node. Each person's planetary placements—the gifts and the obstacles, the happy and the sad—are exactly right for them, to help them become who they are meant to be. The South Node in everyone's chart is exactly 180 degrees opposite the North Node and represents a familiar foundation upon which we come into this life. The challenge for each of us is to not become firmly stationed in this familiar place. The challenge is to allow ourselves to head in the direction of the North Node. If Emma allows herself to head in this direction throughout life, then she will come to fully understand and live out the life purpose she came here to fulfill.

Emma comes into this life tending to see and experience the world as it relates to her group orientation and affiliations. Her “trap” is that she may become too comfortable with these familiar structures and ultimately limit her own freedom. She may want to cling to the idea that everyone in the world should be equal, which would prevent her from individuating and growing as her own person. She may be reluctant to set herself apart because she doesn’t want to upset the dynamic and integrity of the group.

The 9th House is all about higher learning. It is about finding meaning and exploring the higher questions of life that make life rich. It is the house of philosophy, depth psychology, history, justice, morality, theology, foreign culture, teaching, and long journeys. Emma’s family can encourage and remind her that 9th House pursuits are exactly right for her.

The primary “life lesson” for Emma will be to learn how to break out of her secure, safe, familiar group environment and to allow herself to be acknowledged and recognized for her unique presentation of 9th House qualities; to discover and share her individualized insights. Sometimes the North Node direction feels indulgent or too good to be true. Emma may question if she deserves it or has earned it.

The North Node in Leo in the 9th House is about recognizing the contribution that every individual brings to the human experience, Emma’s and others’. Emma comes into this life with a strong mind and the natural gifts of objectivity and compassion for humanity. By tapping into these, she can overcome any fears she may have about exploring the uncharted, uncertain higher questions of life. It’s this continuing quest for higher learning, intuitive journeying, and the formation of her own higher philosophy that is Emma’s intended life path.

Important Note for Parents: This interpretation is based purely on astrological principles, not science. Astrology is metaphor; it is the study of phenomenal patterns linking the positions of celestial bodies and celestial points to human behavior. These patterns have been observed for nearly 5,000 years, and astrology evolves over time to reflect the current age. Since astrology is subject to individual interpretation, Peggy Schick / peggyschick.com does not make any guarantee on the accuracy of interpretation. This report, therefore, has no legal or contractual significance.

What is most important, however, is that the parent/s of this child recognize that each child is their own special person, and each grows into their own on their own time and in their own way. This report should be used as just one form of insight into understanding the beautiful soul and yearnings of your child.

Planetary transits throughout life, and cultural, economic, educational, health, and other influences all play a significant role in a person's ability to fully express the characteristics in their natal chart.

The parents' own needs in life may not be the same as the child's needs in life. It will be important for parents to always give their child what the child needs to develop, not what the parents need or want for their child.

As you read this interpretation of your child's astrological chart, remain free of judgment and from projections of what you think of as good and right. Only then can you see the real potential of your child, and only then can you truly open up for your child, so that your child can become the beautiful person they are meant to become.
